

System Installation & Commissioning

Every system designed here at APD Ltd is installed and commissioned by our own technicians and engineers, never subcontractors. We place significant effort on the installation and commissioning of our systems to ensure that everything functions as it should.

No matter how good things have looked on paper, only when a system is in its working environment can the full strengths and weaknesses of a system be seen, identified and dealt with.

By taking complete control of the installation, using our own experienced technicians and engineers, we ensure that the final system performs to, or better than, its original design concept.

Installation and commissioning can take place in the UK or overseas; onshore, at sea on a ship or offshore. Over the years our engineers have experienced working in many parts of the world in many extreme conditions and we have a proven track record of success.
